Custom Publishing

NC Magazine

The team behind Native StoryLab helped launch NC Magazine for The National Center in 2021, and has produced the annual publication every year since. The business magazine reaches 10,000+ readers at the annual Reservation Economic Summit (RES) and via mail distribution, showcasing the leaders and initiatives driving Native economies.

Native StoryLab publishes powerful works rooted in journalism from Native News Online. Visions for a Better Indian Country by Levi Rickert shares bold opinion pieces aimed at uplifting Native communities. Indian Boarding Schools: A Native News Online Reporting Project compiles in-depth stories, interviews, and essays exposing the painful legacy of forced assimilation. Both reflect our mission to inform, heal, and empower through authentic Indigenous storytelling.

Reports, Recaps

Native Story Lab has partnered with the Native CDFI Network (NCN), a national nonprofit advocating for Native Community Development Financial Institutions. Our collaboration has produced policy reports, multimedia storytelling, and event coverage that amplifies NCN's mission to strengthen Native CDFIs and increase capital access for Indigenous communities and entrepreneurs.

INVESTING IN THE FUTURE OF INDIAN COUNTRY

2024
Annual Policy & Advocacy Report

MAY 10, 2024

This is a historic moment for Native CDFIs and Indian Country.

I am honored to announce that the Native CDFI Network, alongside its members and partners, has been selected as the lead organization for the U.S. Department of the Interior's Greenhouse Gas Reduction Accelerator (GQRA) program. This historic opportunity to fund tens of thousands of clean energy projects across the country — from residential rooftop solar panels and electric vehicle charging stations, to small-business and large-scale energy projects.

POLICY PROGRESS & HIGHLIGHTS

GREENHOUSE GAS REDUCTION FUND
Funded at $27 billion, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Greenhouse Gas Reduction Fund (GQRA) is a historic, once-in-a-generation opportunity to fund tens of thousands of clean energy projects across the country — from residential rooftop solar panels and electric vehicle charging stations, to small-business and large-scale energy projects.

As part of its mission to strengthen Native CDFIs and provide them with resources, the Native CDFI Network will provide technical assistance to its members and partners.

NCN POLICY & ADVOCACY UPDATE - Q1 2024

Native CDFI Network (NCN) is off to a strong start this year, building on the momentum of our 2023 summit, which drew a record attendees and featured more than 50 speakers, including officials from 18 federal agencies, Congressional members, impact investors, philanthropic organizations, and thought leaders from around the country. Here are a few highlights of the work we've done in the first quarter of 2024.

JANUARY

- Collaborated with 11 national Native-serving organizations to craft economic policy briefs for Congress and the Biden Administration, focusing on tangible steps to enhance tribal economies and support Native-owned businesses.
- Hosted a webinar on the New Markets Tax Credit Native Initiative, attracting participants keen on increasing investment in tribal areas.
- Unveiled NCN's 2024 Policy Priorities, outlining key federal objectives to strengthen Native CDFIs and improve access to capital in Native communities.

- Collaborated with 17 national Native-serving organizations to support the bipartisan Native American Entrepreneurial Opportunity Act (H.R. 7020) and its Senate counterpart (S. 1550).
- Joined hundreds of federal stakeholders in urging Congress to safeguard the EPA Greenhouse Gas Reduction Fund against potential legislative threats.
- Launched Initiative Prosperity, a technical assistance platform aimed at enhancing small business success within Native CDFIs.
- Launched the 2024 NCN Leadership Institute session, featuring workshops led by Lisa Wagner of Business Consulting Inc. on certification requirements.

FEBRUARY

- Conducted a webinar spotlighting the USDA Rural Development's Rural Business Development Grant Program.
- Joined with NCN members and allies in advocating for the Scaling Community Lenders Act of 2023 (S. 1442) and the Community Development Investment Act of 2023 (H.R. 1000).

- Partnered with the U.S. Department of the Interior's Greenhouse Gas Reduction Accelerator (GQRA) program to support tribal communities in accessing clean energy funding.
- Partnered with the U.S. Department of the Interior's Greenhouse Gas Reduction Accelerator (GQRA) program to support tribal communities in accessing clean energy funding.

MARCH

- Collaborated with University of North Carolina and others to offer a free

- virtual training course tailored for Native CDFIs, empowering participants to leverage solar technology for cost and emission reduction.
- Attended the 2024 National Indigenous Community Reinvestment Conference, advocating for proactive engagement between CDFI staff and NCN to enhance connections with Native CDFIs.
- Lead panel discussions on clean-energy finance at the 2024 Reservation Economic Summit (RES), attracting over 4,500 tribal and business leaders.
- Endorsed the Tribal Rural Housing Access Act (S. 3906) to expand housing access for tribal communities, including provisions benefiting Native CDFIs.
- Collaborated with Climate United on a climate finance event in Rapid City, S.D., engaging stakeholders on climate action and financial opportunities.
- Hosted an NCN Live webinar on the USDA-RD Rural Microenterprises Assistance Program, providing financing options for rural and native communities.

WHY NATIVE CDFIs MATTER

"Native CDFI Network has a robust plan for amplifying the NCN's funding through their Community Lender Network. They know Native CDFIs, and Native CDFIs know Indian Country. They're going to work with their Native CDFIs to get the money out the door and into tribal communities over the next few years."

NATIVE CDFI NETWORK 2023 SUMMIT

TOP 10 TAKEAWAYS

Native CDFI Network (NCN) hit a new peak with its fourth annual Policy and Capacity Building Summit on December 3-4 at the Hyatt Regency in Washington, DC.

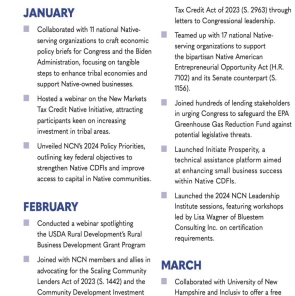

The annual event drew a record 220 attendees and featured more than 50 speakers, including officials from 18 federal agencies, Congressional members, impact investors, philanthropic organizations, and thought leaders from around the country.

"This year's summit highlighted a positive shift in how federal officials, donors and partners are engaging with Native CDFIs and tribal communities," NCN CEO Pete Lipson (Petalist) said. "Now, we need them to stand with us as we envision a future where Native communities are not just pursuing financial inclusion, but are actively pursuing financial opportunity."

Here are 10 top takeaways from the more than two dozen discussions, panels, and fireside chats during NCN 2023 Summit.

- THE FUTURE OF THE NATIVE CDFI INDUSTRY IS BRIGHT — AND GREEN. There was lots of buzz throughout the Summit about clean energy, increased federal funding, and the need to build the financial and operational capacity of Native CDFIs. In a keynote session, NCN's Kristin Wagner and consultant for forward-looking the future effort to bring together 43 Native CDFIs and other qualified community lenders to submit the only Native-led, exclusive Native-serving Clean Communities Investment Accelerator application that could bring tens of billions to Indian Country. CDFI leaders, in the final session of the summit, Wagner and Wagner shared the stage once again to take new resources for Native CDFIs, including white papers, policy briefs, webinars, events and a new program called "Initiative Prosperity" to serve business lead designed to support NCN members and business success.
- EVERYTHING WE DO IS WITH THE INTENTION TO SUPPORT OUR NATIVE CDFI MEMBERS. — To make your jobs a little bit easier, to make your life a little bit easier and to get that capital flowing so you can do the important work that you do." — Kristin Wagner, Native CDFI Network
- THE NEW COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT ACT (CRA) REGULATIONS ARE A GAME CHANGER FOR INDIAN COUNTRY. The CRA is a new federal law that will provide investment in Indian Country, according to Jesse Van Tol, President and CEO of National Community Reinvestment Coalition. But realizing its full potential will require sustained advocacy, collaboration among Native communities, and ongoing efforts to address the challenges of implementation and accountability. By actively engaging with the new regulations and building capacity, Native communities can leverage them to secure faster and more equitable treatment for their regions, he said.
- CRA works when you do. It's a framework, and you can evolve the framework to the degree to which it's helpful to you to promote investments in your communities, to create partnerships for your organizations." — Jesse Van Tol, National Community Reinvestment Coalition
- TREASURY IS LISTENING TO NATIVE CDFIs, PROBABLY MORE SO THAN EVER. NCN CEO Pete Lipson welcomed United States Treasury Secretary "Lumpy" Yellen, Chief of the Mortgage Trust, and Eugene Allen (Shelton) Sporn for a fireside chat about the U.S. Treasury's efforts to Indian Country. Unsurprisingly, Yellen's comments were not just a little bit helpful, but a strategic road map for building economic development and prosperity in Indian Country. Through the Indian Country Development Act, Yellen and Allen, who serves as the first director of the Treasury's Office of Tribal and Native Affairs, shared specific details about the agency's intention to engage with Tribal Nations, remove roadblocks to capital, educate staff about Indian Country, and unleash the power of Native CDFIs.
- "We need to hear your voices — not just to consult, but throughout the process. Your expertise, your concerns, your vision — these are the ingredients for a truly equitable future. Sharing our stories, our successes, and our struggles is how we bridge the gap between policy and reality." — Treasurer Yellen, United States Treasury
- "There's a lot more capacity to make policy changes than it probably feels like on the outside. I know when I was on the outside, getting to federal agencies seemed to be a little bit, but we really do take all of your input, all of your concerns. We do push them through and, at least during this administration, we have seen a lot of willingness to revise programs. We are engaged with us." — Kristin Wagner, Native CDFI Network
- ONE OF INDIAN COUNTRY'S "WELL-KEPT SECRETS" IS REINVENTING ITSELF AS IT TURNS 50. Kristin Wagner (Lipson), President of the Administration for Native Americans (ANA) talked about the agency's mission and vision, vision. Under top-down direction of the past, Wagner emphasized ANA's commitment to tribal self-determination and the importance of the agency's role in the economic, social, economic and environmental aspects of Indian Country. Native CDFIs are a priority partner of ANA, she said.
- "Native CDFIs make the most important investments and deliver the most impressive impact in Native communities. They are directly responsible for enhancing financial literacy for every citizen, for creating access to capital, for building homes, entrepreneurs and business. So it's just phenomenal, the work the Native CDFIs do and quite simply, I think Native CDFIs are the best champions of Indian Country investments." — Peter Reynolds, Administration for Native Americans

- NATIVE CDFIs CAN PLAY A LEAD ROLE IN HELPING TRIBAL COMMUNITIES CAPITALIZE ON A ONCE-IN-A-GENERATION OPPORTUNITY. That was a key point of emphasis during a panel discussion on building a clean energy finance ecosystem through the EPA Greenhouse Gas Reduction Act. Attorney Phil Thomas (Petalist) led the panel — consisting of Just Blue of QED Alternatives, Thomas Shover (Shover) of Alliance for Tribal Clean Energy, and Just Blue of QED Alternatives — through a discussion that stressed the importance of aggregating projects and creating shared financial resources to support the growth of the sector. The panelists discussed the importance of energy planning, integration of clean energy into broader development projects, and coordination with contractors were identified as critical steps for Tribal Nations to maximize the impact of clean energy initiatives.
- "We need to be in Indian Country, we have to ride that wave, and we have to grow our own to benefit from it." — Thomas Shover, Alliance for Tribal Clean Energy
- IMPACT INVESTORS NEED FINANCIAL PARTNERS TO BRING TO BEING CLEAN ENERGY TO UNDESERVED COMMUNITIES, INCLUDING TRIBAL LANDS. Forest Langlois outlined the National Clean Energy Finance (NCEF) strategy at a conference of experienced, multi-sector investors. Langlois shared the details of the $14 billion clean energy program. Langlois said Climate United wants 60% of funds invested directly to low-income and underserved communities, exceeding the EPA's 40% requirement. Of those funds, they are targeting 30% for tribal communities and Climate United has an overall aim to benefit 15 million Americans, create 200,000+ quality jobs, and provide sustainable housing for 200,000+ families.
- "We need partners and we want to be accountable to you all around these goals. And really — we want this money to go to the places and people where it can directly benefit people here." — Kristin Wagner, United States Treasury
- INDEPENDENT RESEARCH AND DATA ABOUT NATIVE CDFIs SHAPE PUBLIC POLICY. Casey Loez (Lipson) and Michael Katsikides discussed initiatives and research about Native CDFIs conducted by the Center for Indian Country Development (CICD), a unit of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. The duo highlighted the CICD's commitment to advancing economic self-determination for Tribal Nations, emphasizing the importance of data in informing public policy, particularly in identifying the barriers that Native Indian Country. The discussion focused on various research projects conducted by the CICD, focusing on Native CDFIs' lending practices and their unique approaches to understanding low-risk credit risks.
- "We don't lobby and we don't advocate. We use our independent information, as all of our research and data work is meant to inform or contribute to good public policy. So what we get, we realize about being on stage today with all of you is that, in many ways, it's your opportunity. And it's your responsibility to take some of the research that we do in our research efforts for Native CDFIs and your communities." — Casey Loez, Center for Indian Country Development
